As a believer . . .

As a believer in the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, God's covenant with us is life and peace. (Malachi 2:5).

God gives life and peace to individuals who

- Honor God and His Name
- Speak the ways of God
- Separate from unbelief and wickedness
- Encourage others to turn from unbelief and wickedness

If we desire . . .

If we desire more life and peace today, it is possible to have it. Let us be encouraged to increase our involvement in God's agreement. This can be done by focusing our attention on honoring God, speaking God's truth (to ourselves and others), separating ourselves from all unbelief and wickedness, and encouraging others to turn to God.

Some suggestions . . .

Here are some suggestions to increase life and peace in your life.

- Read Micah 6:8 then determine one new habit you could implement to honor God's requirement.
- Select and memorize a passage of scripture that instructs you in a truth you have difficulty remembering. Say it often to yourself and others.
- Identify an area of your life you've allowed unbelief and/or wickedness to creep in. Throw it out of your life. Don't let it come back.
- Show compassion to someone today in a kind act, letting the light of the Father shine so the individual would be encouraged to turn to the Father.
